POLITICAL NOTES.

—"We shall never," pathetically exclaims a Democratic paper down in Tenessee, "have another Johnson in this gone ration." Thank God!

—The Legislature has voted to adjourn next Friday, May 15th, they might have adjourned before, it would not have given offence to the people.

—We can not, for the life of us, see why so much fuss should be made over the recent discovery of a race of pigmies in Central Africa. Look at our own Congress!

—Hon. Joseph Allison, President Judge of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, has written a letter positively refusing to be a candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court.

—A Democratic paper down East scouts all money that won't "jingle." Just so. The principles of that party are chiefly based on "Jingle"—Alfred's—immortalized by Dickens.

—The New York World continues its cheerful predictions of a sweeping Democratic victory in the next Presidential campaign. But what saith the Scripture? "The expectations of the wicked shall perish."

—Observe what misdirected efforts n politics can accomplish. Four ex-Tammany aldermen of New York city have, within a comparatively short period, passed from the Council of the City Fathers to lunatic asylums.

—The Hon. Israel Washburn, ex-Governor and ex-Congressman, is announced as a candidate for the United States Senatorship from Maine, to succeed Senator Hamlin. The chances are strong that Mr. Hamlin will be his own successor.

—The Democracy intend making a strong effort to nominate Col. Noyes for Governor; and to further their schemes it is probable that they will establish a paper here, with what backing they can command, to advocate his claims.—Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin.

—At the municipal election at Oakdale, California, on Monday, the Booth candidates, known as the "Independents" or "Dolly Vardens," were beaten by unprecedented majorities. This is the first important election helddn the State since booth made his contest for United State Senator.

—One of the most suggestive facts connected with the pending investigation by Congress into various kinds of corruption is, that wherever the investigators bore they are sure to strike Democrats. The case of W. G. Moore, ex-Private Secretary of ex-Acting President Johnson, affords the latest illustration of this truth.

—Speaking of the Republican party and the recent assault upon it, the Indianapolis Journal says:—"No other party has ever shown the same readiness to expose and punish the wrongs done in its name, and none has ever called its leaders to such swift and severe account for political shortcomings. Whatever may be the faults of the Republican party, it is far more competent to manage the affairs of this country than any combination which can be formed out of the heterogeneous materials opposed to it. It can give the people all needed reforms that cannot be reached through the agency of any organization now in existence or likely to be formed."

—The opposition press is making a great outcry over the fact—which, certainly, is shameful enough—that twenty Republican County Treasurers in South Carolina have turned out to be defaulters. We trust these righteously indignant papers will not take it amiss if we remind them that this is two less than the number of Democratic counties in Ohio in whose Treasury departments defalcations have been discovered within the past year or so.

It is a curious study to hearken to the fulsomeness with which, since the dishonorable publication of Mr. Sumner's "suppressed speech," the Democratic papers praise the dead statesman whom, living, they hated. It is as though a charlatan should plaster the tomb of a great physician with posters of his quack medicines.

NEW POLITICAL HISTORY FOR THE STUDY OF CONGRESS.

The people begin to fear that Congress fails to fathom the financial problem presented by their necessities, and daily they lose hope for good results. Alarmists and shrewd operators take advantage of these fears of the people, and through their credulity pray upon their substance.

The question has been talked to death in Congress, and out of it has been written into tatters, without eliciting more than sundry keen analyses of the path over which we, as a nation, and other people before us, have come. Experience, at best, is but a good storm light, it throws no light upon the path over which we are to travel, for seldom, if ever, are the circumstances destined to control the same as those gone before, and while Congressmen crow and spout about leading events in the past, of which history fails to leave the exact facts, the prosperity and material interests of the people are allowed to languish, and discontent and doubt to seize upon the public mind.

When the Rebellion was at its height, experience said it was simply impossible for twenty millions of people to subdue ten millions, the world had presented no such example and it could not be done. It was done, and we as a people record a new history.

The ardent sympathizers with the rebellion, together with experience, said that the greenback currency was but the French assignat over again, that it was worthless and could never be productive of good, that it would lead to national bankruptcy, and that it could not be made or forced to support the war! It did more than it promised, for it not only furnished the means to conduct the war and preserve to us our government, but it created a new and productive wealth ten times greater than its own volume, and is today preferred by the people to any money they have ever known. Is this again have we not made a new history?

What an intelligent free people may do with money of the kind we now have, based upon the wealth of the whole country, it might be prophecy to foretell, but if this Congress shall have to be inspired with sufficient common sense to obey the wishes of the people, and disregard the miser's scheme and hope of scarce and dear money, the historian who shall come after us will note upon his pages that, notwithstanding what the Schurzs, the Shermans and the others of that ilk had gathered from results of the past, this people, in their material progress, had still again made new history.

Must the Chandlers, the Scotts and the rest who would steer the ship of state wholly by a stern light, be told that the utmost they can hope for, is to reach some haven surrounded and circumscribed by the condition and state of things which attended upon the people from whom they gather their inspiration!

Are we as a people to be taught that at best we are capable of no higher attainment than the serfs of Kings? or, that the theories, rules of guidance, and money, seemed the best for the semi-barbarous, educated in wars and robbery, shall be only those which we shall try?

Our education has been in the paths of peace and industry, with war the exception, and now after ten years of experiment with new money, resulting in the most marvelous development the world has witnessed, Congress hesitates whether or not it will be best to fetter the young Giant and, to please the notions of foreigners and foreign traders, strangle him, lest in his onward course this new world-wonder shall further disturb the theories gathered from defunct ages with another startling new history.

—The farmers of Adams county, Ill., have resolved to nominate their own candidates this year. There were twenty three farmers present at the mass meeting. Inasmuch as the county cast 9,520 votes at the last election, it will be seen that the new party there contains not quite one-quarter of one per cent. of the voting population.—St. Lou's Globe.

LEAFING.

Although the sun entered the sign of Aries on the 20th of March at 58 minutes past one o'clock in the afternoon, ushering in the vernal equinox and the beginning of spring, up to this time we have had but little spring-like weather. We usually have more or less freezing weather in this latitude, after the sun enters this sign, but it is rare that spring lingers as it has at the present season. Since the last fall of snow, however, the weather has softened and for the past few days the aspect of things has very much improved.

Among the manifold operations of nature in this period of the year, there is nothing that is invested with more interest than the opening of the buds and the unfolding of the countless leaves of the forest; and while all are interested in the general subject, and rejoice when the trees put on their beautiful garments of green, there are few indeed who have studied or endeavored to understand the methods by which this wonderful process is accomplished. One of our most gifted poets has said that "To him who in the love of nature holds communion with her visible forms, she speaks a varied language," and it is no less true that to such a one she unlocks her secret store of knowledge.

There are two kinds of buds, viz: the leaf bud containing the rudiments of a leafy stem or branch, and the flower bud containing the same elements only transformed into the nascent organs of the flower, for the purpose of reproducing its species. The leaf bud is formed the previous year and is closely wrapped in its covering of imbricated scales, to protect its form from the extreme cold of our northern winters. In warm countries even in the same species of trees, the scaly armor is entirely wanting and when a shrub or tree is transplanted to the green-house, the scales do not form upon the buds, proving conclusively that this is a wise provision of nature to protect the incipient leaf from the winter's cold.

The vernation of the bud, which relates to the arrangement of the leaf-organs of which it is formed, present as thousand different forms and is best seen by making a cross section of the bud in its swollen state, with a sharp knife. Buds are either terminal or axillary. The terminal bud is the one always found at the end of a branch or twig, and if destroyed there can be no further growth in that direction. The axillary bud is one on the body of a twig or branch and may be active and develop into a leaf, in which case it usually becomes terminal, or it may remain latent from year to year, and perhaps never become quickened into growth at all.

Some leaves are much more sensitive to cold than others, and these longer require the protection of the winter coat of imbricated scales. The bud of the beech can now be studied to good advantage, on account of its great size. The beech too is one of our most beautiful forest trees. In its winter suit of gray it always presents a neat and tidy appearance, and in the glory of its summer garb it has no superior among all the trees of the forest.

With the balmy breath of spring, the long slender buds of the beech begin to swell as the scaly coat slackens, next the green tips of the leaves begin to protrude and then, under the genial influence of the sun, the perfect leaf will soon begin to expand, delicate and tender at first, but growing finer as it matures.

The young leaves of the red maple are conspicuously brilliant early in the season. These leaves, which are red at first, afterwards change to green, and still later when the woods puts on their autumnal glory, they change to red again.

All the numerous members of the birch family (betulæ) are early susceptible to the genial warmth of spring. The pendulous tassels, of a pale yellow hue, ornament the drooping boughs and cover the ground beneath them with a shower of pollen. The catkins which are seen between the budding leaves are beautiful in shading and in outline. The yellow birch (betuia excelsa), is one of the finest as well as the most valuable members of the birch family. The white birch (betula papyracea,) is not a general favorite, yet were it not so common, on account of its beautiful white and tapering trunk, its symmetrical form and green foilage, it would be extensively cultivated as an ornamental tree. It is a weed among the trees and generally grows where it is not wanted.

We might extend our observations to an almost unlimited extent, would our space permit, and then not exhaust this prolific subject. Each class of trees has a method of unfolding peculiar to itself, and all serve to illustrate the forms of beauty, design, forethought and matchless skill which pervade all the works of nature.

While we cannot too much admire the growing glory of the woods, we should not forget nor overlook the varied forms of beauty which lie at our feet. The May-flower (Epigea-repens) almost pushes itself through the snow and in this latitude it is the earliest flower to attract us by its modest beauty and sweet perfume.

In the swamp the fern family begin to uncurl their wooly fronds and stand huddled in groups, like bishops in council with crossiers uplifted. The showy Benjamin may now be seen along the borders of the forest streams and is valued more for the delicate tints of its flowers than for its fragrance.

The different varieties of the violet family make their appearance on grassy slopes, and such slopes inclining to the South, will often be found covered with them, while huge drifts of snow are in the immediate vicivity.—Other blossoms of various kinds now follow in rapid succession, and ere long the woods and fields will be clothed in their green liveries and embelished with the delicate tints of thousands of flowers.

IMPORTANT advices are received from Spain. The national forces under Marshal Serrano have entered Bilboa, driving away the Carlists who retreated in great disorder.

Bilboa is the capital of the province of Biscay on the Nervion, six miles from its mouth at Portugalete, and is the principal port on the north coast of Spain. It is an important stragetic point, being situated in that section of the country where the adherents of Don Carlos have the most strength and where their operations have been mostly confined. For months the Carlists have been besieging the city, and with every prospect of final success, until Sarreno took the field in person. Since then many sanguinary conflicts have taken place with varied success, but recently the Republicans have received large reinforcements and the latest despatches indicated that they were compelling the Carlists to abandon their strongest points. With the fall of Bilboa and the scattering of the beseiging army the fortunes of Don Carlos will probably wane.

ARKANSAS.

Meeting of Representatives of Baxter and Brooks in Washington—A Plan Proposed by Attorney General Williams for Settlement of the Difficulty.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 9.—Representatives and attorneys of the contesting parties in Arkansas, consisting of Senators Clayton and Dorsey, Representatives Heynes, Hodge and Snyder, and ex-Senator Rice on the part of Brooks, and Representative Wilshire, Judge Lowe and Secretary of State Johnson on the part of Baxter, have been in consultation nearly all day and up to midnight to-night, in their effort to compromise the difficulties in that State and to prevent further effusion of blood. Much difficulty was experienced in reaching a conclusion on the base of a compromise, and the situation, with all its attending circumstance, was freely discussed. Finally a plan of settling the political difficulties in Arkansas was agreed on, and telegraphed, at one o'clock this morning, to Brooks and Baxter for their acceptance.

The plan agreed upon, which was drawn up by Attorney General Williams, is to the effect that the Legislature of the State shall be called together by Brooks and Baxter, to meet in extra session on the fourth Monday in May, and that the Legislature so called shall be permitted to meet without molestation or hindrance by either party. They shall receive and entertain communications and investigate facts and allegations in manner prescribed by the Constitution and laws of the State, giving to both parties a full and fair hearing upon such competent testimony as either party may offer. The Legislature shall determine which of the contestants received at the November election of 1872 a majority of legal votes, and declare to result, and the parties shall abide by that action. Meanwhile, both contestants shall cease from all warlike demonstrations, and keep absolute peace with each other and their adherents.

FIGHTING IN THE CITY.

LITTLE ROCK, May 9.—Considerable firing has been going on in the city today, but only one man has been shot. Some captures were made. The Baxter party this morning fixed a barricade extending from Elm street to the river and since morning have permitted none to pass in or out of their lines without pass. All the stores are closed to-day and there is no attempt to do any business. Nearly enough members of the Legislature have arrived to form a quorum. Baxter has to-day received strong reinforcements.

WEEK before last for the first time in the history of the republic a negro temporarily occupied the Speaker's chair, in the National House of Representatives. The person thus honored was Joseph H. Rainey, the Representative of the First South Carolina district, who was born a slave in Georgetown, 1832. During the war he was forced to work on the fortifications of the Confederates in Charleston, from whence he escaped to the West Indies, returning to his native town at the close of the war. He has been a member of Congress several times and is highly respected by the members of the House. But our neighbor across the way (The Watchman,) edited by that very pure patriot P. G. Meek, who during the war counseled resistance to every effort to save the country, is disgusted and comes out with an extract from a Chicago paper, in place of a leading editorial entitled a "Nigger in the chair," in order to show how absurd some people can be. We make the following extract which is in keeping with the whole article: 'Could Clay, Calhoun, and other gentlemen of the old regime, have stepped into the house at Washington, on Wednesday, they would have been overwhelmed by the spectacle of a nigger in the chair of the speaker! What Jackson would have said, or the venerable James Buchanan would have thought, of Bully Brooks would have done, could they have witnessed this African thus darkening the seat of the chief officer, passes the power of imagination.

Now how is that for argument at this late day? It must be very important indeed what Bully Brooks or the weak kneed Buchanan might think of this matter, thank God the civilization of this century has advanced so far that those old fogies might well be surprised if they could take a look at us now, and we take some pride in the fact that we have advanced a great way beyond their ideas of right and justice to the negro. Some of the colored men in congress, to their credit be it said, are the equals of any in that body, and indeed the colored orator Elliott has few equals in the country. Such men are as worthy to sit in the speaker's place as any one and we see no reason why we should not be proud to claim them as American citizens, the equal of, any man, be he white or black. It would seem as though some people were afraid that the black race would become our masters. For ourselves we have no such fears and do not consider it at all complimentary to the anglo saxon race and blood when we hear intelligent men whining about the fact that the negro is allowed an equal chance in the race of life. If there are minds filled with golden gems of thought under a black skin let the world have the benefit, say we, and we may feel proud that under our system of government a man so lately a slave, forbidden the privilege of reading and writing, can be developed in ten short years into a bright intellectual star, an honor to the state and counytr which he serves.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

I.

And the mothers met in council, for an evil
cursed the land,
To devise some sure procedure to stay its spoiling hand;
And they held the tempter up, so that every one could see
The alcoholic demon that has claimed the victory.

II.

And they clothed themselves in armor, which so surely wins the fight,
With conscious hearts, high beating, in their crusade for the right;
And in places where the evil in chaotic revel came,
Rose the all convincing prayer and the song of living flame.

III.

And the doors were shut and windows barred, and all the wicked sin,
Was kept from thirsting lips that had frantic drank it in,
So often and so deeply (it was better they were dead)
That mankood crouched behind while both shame and reason fled

IV.

Well, and too at times, 'tis well such persuasive rein to draw,
Tho' it turns almost to mockery the genius of our law;
Still words and smiles benignant are better than the sword,
And urge millennial progress which the times can well afford.

V.

But look upon the street, and the alley's narrower way,
And note you this vile profanity that soils the bliss of day;
What use to pray in rum shop, or yet, the viler den
If unguided youthful students are thus growing up to men!

VI.

Or take the cloak of darkness, ling'ring modesty's excuse,
And surely man may take it, many maidens claim its use
And skirt along the rim of our social city life,
And judge what most of good or ill our customs give to life.

VII.

Tax laws breed bad citizens bears much of dread import
And the judge upon the bench sees its truth within his court.
Loose reig s let youth go truant till the mind has gone astray,
And builds on that foundation, for it knows no better way.

VIII.

Youth meets age upon the way, too often dull and blind,
Giving for a sum of years what is stored up in the mind;
Then 'twere well if it were furnished with that richer, better pelf,
That guards against all evils and crowns the victor self.

IX.

Better keep the youth from sin, better keep its footsteps in,
'Twill need a lighter prayer than to curb this raging sin.
And it will not, with the tempter, the downward road begin
So, to save it from his clutches, keep thy youth within.

X.

Make a home within the threshold that will charm the youthful eye,
Make it full of earthly treasures that gold can not win or buy;
And keep your jewels there till in manhood firmly set,
Then your prayers will shield your offspring and their life bring no regret.

XI.

But let these tender plants grow up upon the street,
The rum fiend gains his legions, and their ruin is complete;
And to follow where they go praying mothers must begin,
If they do not watch their footsteps and keep them in, from sin.

COWS AND MILK.

At a late meeting of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, sundry topics of interest to the farming community were discussed, and we make abstract from the report of the proceedings to the New England Farmer: Dr. George B. Loring spoke on the subject of breeding and feeding stock. He thought that but little progress had been made during the past fifteen years The old theory that "like produces like," is not true. Horses do produce horses, pigs produce pigs, cats produce cats, &c. but the rule is applicable no farther.' Under the old law or rule, you expect to breed like the parents. Every breeder knows that to produce a male fit to breed from is very difficult. Not one in five hundred years is fit to breed from. The great value of the Short-horns is in the fact that they produce more valuable males than any other strain. Horses do not produce animals like parents. Speed does not reproduce itself. The best looking animals are not always the best for breeders. Inferior looking animals often carry stronger family traits than others that have a better outside appearance. Animals are influenced by external circumstances. A cruel tyrranical master cannot raise a superior class of animals. A calm, self-possessed, reliable man, is the one who will have the highest strains of animals in the world.

The lower in the scale of moral and intellectual condition an animal may be, the nearer it will breed towards perfection. The lazy, thoughtless, stupid pig breeds more uniformly than the nervous and more highly developed trotting horse. The Short-horns that have small brains and not easily disturbed, breed nearer to the standard than those breeds that have been kept for the dairy. A good dairy cow has a large brain and is very sensitive. Such cows do not produce as good cows as themselves. Milch cow breeding is the most difficult of all breeding. The man who would succeed must possess his soul in a separate piece. Everything about the premises must be peaceful and quiet. To produce a dairy cow, the calf must be weaned young. Do not let it get fat. Make it look as much like a cow in miniature as possible. Do not feed much meal, or oil meal, or milk. Feed turnips and keep them quiet. Feed for milk, not beef. Oil meal and cotton seed meal had destroyed a good herd of cows for him. Meal disturbs the cow. She should have that food which most approaches her natural food. Feed turnips, green corn, and roven if you have it.

He spoke very highly of Hungarian grass as food for milch cows. It is better than timothy, cut and mixed with shorts and corn meal. Raised from seventy five to a hundred tons on his farm this year. Steamed food is not good for cows. It causes dispepsia. He pronounced the noted Tip-tree farm, in England a failure. The steam pipes, the water pipes, and the liquid manure pipes are rusting, the barns are becoming unsightly. Indeed, Tip-tree is "bust."

The Doctor believes in putting hot water on corn-stalks, but will not use steam. Twice a day is often enough to feed. Cows must have time to chew and digest their food. Mr. Ellsworth's system of feeding but twice a day is the true one. His own cows are fed in the morning, (does not know what time, as he does not get up to see,) all they will eat clean and then again in the afternoon. At all other times they are quiet. Visitors can see them at any time. By good care and management, the farmer can build up a family of cows that he may be proud of, and which are just as valuable as the best herds that can be imported.

During the discussion which followed, Bela Stone spoke very favorably of steaming food for stock. Can keep a stock of cattle for ten cents per day for the material fed. Fifteen cents will cover all cost.

Hon. Harris Lewis, speaking on the subject of milk, said he had had something to do with milk all his days, but sometimes thought he did not know much about it. Milk contains about 88 per cent. water, the remaining 12 per cent. solid matter, is composed of butter, cheese, sugar, and a little earthy matter. It seems strange that an article of food containing so much water should be so valuable. It is capable, alone of sustaining the life of man from the hour of his birth to his death, no matter how long the time intervening. It is the cheapest food known to us to-day. The cost of preparing all wiped out. It contains no waste, no bone, and yet has sufficient bone material in it. He considered the total value of the milk crop of the United States was not less than five hundred millions of dollars annually. If the census returns did not come up to this figures, it was because farmers and farmer's wives, when questioned by the census takers, suppose that the census had something to do with taxes, and do not give in a full report of what they raise, or the marshals are incompetent to transact the business put in their hands. They are often careless or indifferent. At least, it is so in Herkimer county.

He spoke of the specific gravity of milk, and said some people add to the weight of milk by diluting it with water. Water mixes so naturally with milk that the temptation is too strong to bear. The cheese factory system has developed rascality and roguery. Every association has its one black sheep in the flock. Men whom he would have trusted with his pocket book, have watered their milk. He would explain, however, that if he had trusted them with his pocket book, he would not have left much money in it.

He next spoke of the lactometer and said the New York Courts had tried to establish this as a test of milk, which would have been a great mistake, as the weight of milk does not determine its value. The lactometer does very well as sentinel to hang at the entrance of the factory, as a warning to patrons. The hydrometer, in skilful hands, will test the value of milk. Sometimes fishes have been found in the milk brought to the factory. This is very strong presumptive evidence. Thinks when milk is being watered the rogue is more likely to be looking up and down the road, to see if anybody is in sight than at the water, so a little fish might easily escape notice. One little boy accounted for the fish by saying that "pa's cows run in a pasture where there is brook with lots of fish in it, and the cows always drink in that brook.

The factories have adopted pure milk from our native mixed herds as a standard. If milk comes to the factory adulterated, it is tested by that standard. The hydrometer will show just how much water must be added to pure milk, to make it as poor as the sample.

Milk comes to us loaded with germs prepared for its own destruction. These putrefactive germs can be retarted or hastened in their growth, and they can be killed, by heating to 212 degrees. Freshly drawn milk also emits an animal odor. This is worse in unhealthy than in healthy cows. Few people relish new milk when just drawn. This animal odor has caused a great deal of trouble. We used to think it was a gas, but have had to give up that idea. The best deodorizer of milk is pure air. We use a pail with small holes in the bottom, through which the milk is poured into the milk cans. The milk falls several feet through the air in very small streams, and in this way, is thoroughly deodorized. It is first strained through cloth, before it enters the perforated pail. Never aerate milk in the stable or where the air is impure, for it may be made worse. The pure air of heaven is just what is wanted. He made many experiments to this question. He took three lots of milk that were all exactly alike.

No. 1. He aired and cooled down to 51 degrees.

No. 2 was shut up in a can at 98 degrees, or the natural temperature of fresh milk, and exposed to the head of the sun, as milk is exposed when carted to the factory or village market in open wagons.

No. 3 was exposed to bad odors, and in forty minutes it had putrefied, and in seventy minutes it was rotten.

No. 2 in seven hours was in the same condition as No. 3—spoiled.

No. 1 after standing one hundred and twenty hours, was perfectly sweet, showing how milk varies under different circumstances.

There are other taints from unclean pails and pans. These taints may be killed by boiling water. Water at a lower temperature may destroy, but nothing less than 212 deg. is safe. And now, to all who use wooden milk pails he would say, use them no longer for milk pails, but buy tin pails for milk Hogs are said to need sour swill, and wooden pails are just the things for them, but they are never fit for milk pails. The neater your wife is, the sooner they will be spoiled; for, if she is neat she will very soon scour off the coat of paint, and then, after each scalding, the pail will be put out on a post or laid on a shelf to dry and get aired in the sun. The effect that follows is the drying and shrinking of the wood by which a hundred little seams will be opened on every square inch of surface, each of which is large enough to take in the particles or atoms of milk. When the farmer comes to milk into these pails at night the water of the milk acts on the pail as it does on all dry wood, by swelling it up and shutting all these seams with the milk in them. The next day the particles of milk are there, out of the reach of the neatest housekeeper, and the pails are again put in the sun to dry. The shrinking process is repeated, and the milk is exposed to the same condition of the sample spoken of, which in seven hours was rotten. The next time it is used it imparts a taint, a ferment like yeast, which will under favorable circumstances, destroy the whole mass. Use tin for all milk vessels, and have as few seems and sharp angles in them as possible.

There are other kinds of taints. Cow stable taints are the most inexcusable of all. He had been called in to see some cheese, at a store in his village. The grocer said he had bought some cheese, of one of Mr. L's neighbors, which did not quite suit his customers, and he wanted to know what was the matter with them. 'I looked at the cheese,' said Mr. L. 'rubbed a little between my fingers smelt of it, tasted it, and told the grocer to let me go—I did not want to say anything about it. 'But,' said the man, 'we want you to tell us what ails this cheese. It cuts well, and feels well, but there is something peculiar about it.' 'Well,' said I, 'if I must tell you, Mr. ——did not put in quite enough milk, with his own measure, to make good cheese of it.'

There are other taints. There are cheese factories in my own State that can never make good cheese till the factories are moved from under them. From soil saturated with putrefying milk, taint atoms will rise by the hundreds of millions. Taint works like yeast—they leaven the whole mess. The end in butter, is rancidity; in cheese, rottenness.

The lecturer spoke in the severest terms of those men who, worse than Herod of old, are destroying the lives of the children of our land by selling adulterated milk, and was not less severe on those mothers who cast their infants from them, to be fed on unnatural food, while they take to themselves pets in the shape of a poodle pup. He would have the adulterated milk fed to the pups, and then compel the men who sold the milk to eat the pups.

Milk, he thought, ought not to be cooled very rapidly, and should be stirred while cooling, to remove the animal oder. He was not quite satisfied as to the comparative advantages of deep or shallow setting. Though if the temperature could be controlled perfectly, deep setting would be preferable. The best cream would come from deep setting, when everything else was favorable.

The discussion that followed the lecture was quite animated.

Mr. Hubbard said he did not allow the use of wooden stoppers for milk cans, at his factory, and objected to the use of wooden pails for milk.

Mr. Rowell, a milk contractor from Boston said he was convinced now, more than ever, that most farmers know comparatively nothing about milk. The milk contractor must be a judge of milk. Farmers will not take proper care, and the hired men are very careless about it. If farmers would realize better prices for their milk, they must see to it that it enters the market sweet and clean, and free from all seeds of putrefaction.

In answer to a question, Mr. Lewis said cabbage and turnips, cooked in the same room with milk or butter, would impart a disagreeable taste to them, and he thought it might yet be possible to give butter a summer smell and flavor by supplying sweet oders to the milk room in winter. Thought it safer to feed turnips and cabbage to cows just after milking than at any other time.

Mr. Root, of Barre, said that farmers in his neighborhood feed turnips to their cows just after milking, and preceived no injurious effects from them. If bad milk was brought to his factory, he sent it back, and the farmers had learned that he was doing them a kindness, as they obtained better price than if he should occasionally allow a bad cheese to go to the market. He often finds it difficulty to make farmers believe their milk is not good. He uses lime and hot water for killing the fermenting particles in the seams and corners of cans.

'He did, Constance Power; he loved you dearly; he wrote letters, and—I destroyed them.'

With a wild cry of anguish, Constance started to her feet.

'O Pauline!' she exclaimed, 'how could you be so cruel?'

'Because he tempted me—he, Sir Richard Ashford, the man I loved, who swore he would make me his wife—fool that I was to believe him!—tempted me with false oaths and deceitful promises to destroy Captain Stapleton's letters. He told me that he hated him, that he wanted to ruin him with you, and I lent myself to the scheme.'

'O, you sinful, wicked woman!' moaned the wretched Constance; 'you know not what you have done.'

'Yes, I do,' replied Pauline; 'but I did not care. I would have broken all the hearts in England if it were in my power, and he had bid me do it. I would have killed my own sister for him!' she hissed. 'But I was justly served. He loves you, Constance Power, and would marry you if he could. Shall I tell you what he did to me? He kicked me out into the street, and I sank lower and lower down, till I came to this.'

Her voice faded away again; but Constance was not heeding her—her hands clasped, her beautiful face convulsed with agony, she was striving to realize all her own terrible sorrow.

'O Victor!' she murmured, 'O my dear lost love! And I sent you away, sent you to India to die!'

'Forgive, forgive!' moaned the dying woman.

'I cannot forgive you. You have ruined my life. God may forgive you, but I cannot."

They were bitter words; but they were wrung from a young heart's terrible agony.

Pauline lay motionless; she had fainted. Constance thought she was dying and flung herself by the side of the bed.

'O Pauline, Pauline!' she cried, 'I did not know what I was saying. It was very hard, it was very cruel; but I forgive—yes, I forgive."

She rubbed her hands, those hands which so ruthlessly destroyed her happiness; she wiped the death-sweat off the pallid brow, sobbing as if her very heart would break.

At last Pauline spoke again. 'Say it again,' she murmured; 'I want to hear you say it again.'

'Can I be obstinate, when my Lord forgives?' replied Constance. 'O Pauline! it is His pardon you must seek, not mine.'

A faint smile stole over the dying woman's face. 'Home—I am going home,' she muttered; 'there is rest for the weary, peace for evermore!'

Again a long and painful silence. Her breath grew shorter every moment. Constance knelt down beside the bed to pray.

'Captain Victor,' murmured Pauline—'he has come back. I saw him—that—that evening at the club.'

Constance clasped her hand. 'What was that you said?' she cried wildly. 'He has come back?'

'Yes; it is true, quite true.'

"Too late, too late!' wailed the girl burying her face in her hands. 'He believed me false; he will never—'

With a violent effort Pauline raised herself on the pillow. 'I did what I could,' she said faintly. 'I wrote to him, too—I told him all—I could not die unless—for—forgiven.'

'And he is here!' exclaimed a manly voice, as the tall form of a stranger emerged from behind the screen, and clasped the trembling Constance in his arms.

'O Constance, my darling! How could I ever have doubted your truth and love? Urged by this poor woman's letter, I reached her some few minutes ago, and hearing you speaking, could not resist the temptation of listening to what you said. I see my blindness and folly now. Can you forget it?'

She lay in his arms. The sudden joy had taken away all power of speech; her soft hair swept his face, the hair that he covered with passionate kisses.

'Victor! Victor!' she murmured at last, her eyes meeting his in their pure, trusting love.

'Never to part again, darling!' he said. 'The long, sad years forever gone; only peace and joy for evermore!'

The gray morning light stole in at the narrow casement window, causing the candle to grow pale and dim, and bringing out in strange relief the actors in this little drama. It fell upon the white and purple flowers—on the miserable truckle-bed—on the girl who stood there in her shimmering silken robes—the man of whom a new existence had begun in a dingy, wretched garret beside the slimy Thames.

So absorbed were they in each other, that they forgot the woman to whom they owed their glad present and their bitter past, the woman from whom earth, with all its misery and all its sin, was slipping fast with every ebb of the tide. And when they turned and looked, she was lying calm and still, with a smile on her lips they had never worn in life, and a light and peace on the poor pale face that could never be taken away.

THE AGASSIZ MEMORIAL.

TEACHERS' AND PUBILS' FUND

BOSTON, MARCH 10, 1874.

LOUIS AGASSIZ, TEACHER. This was the heading of his simple will; this was his chosen title; and it is well known throughout this country, and in other lands, how much he has done to raise the dignity of the profession, and to improve its methods. His friends, the friends of education, propose to raise a memorial to him, by placing upon a strong and enduring basis the work to which he devoted his life, the Museum of Comparative Zoology, which is at once a collection of natural objects, rivaling the most celebrated collections of the Old World, and a school open to all the teachers of the land.

It is proposed that the teachers and pupils of the whole country take part in this memorial, and that on the birthday of Agassiz, the 28th day of May, 1874, they shall each contribute something however small, to the TEACHERS' AND PUPILS' MEMORIAL FUND, in honor of LOUIS AGASSIZ; the fund to be kept separate, and the income to be applied to the expenses of the Museum.

JOHN EATON, Commissioner of Education, Washington, D. C.
JOSEPH HENRY, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C.
JOSEPH WHITE, Secretary of the Board of Education of Massachusetts, Boston.
W. T. HARRIS, Superintendent Public Schools, St. Louis, Mo.
EDWARD J. LOWELL, Boston.
JOHN S. BLATHFORD, Boston.
JAS. M. BARNWARD, Treasurer Teachers' and Pupils' Fund, Boston.

All comunications and remittances for the "Teachers' and Pupils' Fund" of the "Agassiz Memorial," may be sent to the Treasurer,

The Gem Microscope.

The Gem Microscope is truly an optical wonder. It reveals thousands of unseen wonders and curiosities of God's minute creation; the small worlds teeming with animal life, the little things of nature with which we are surrounded, but which are invisible to the naked eye, the thousand and one curiosities and minute objects with many of which we are familiar, because we have read or heard of them, but which to the unaided vision have remained a sealed book, are brought within the realizing reach of our sight and understanding by the use of the Gem and many wonders entirely new to us are also brought to sight by its use. No article for the same price has ever been offered to the public which combines the essential points of valuable instruction and entertaining refined amusement to so great an extent as this instrument; every family has only to appreciate its merits to become its possessor. It is so low-priced that everybody can have one, and so simple a child can use it. Parents should provide their children with this valuable instructor. This Microscope possesses the great advantage of being used by lamp-light as well as by daylight, and thus affords entertainment after the occupations of the day are laid aside. It is safely mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price ($1.50) to any address by THE BEVERLY COMPANY, 973 Wabash Ave., Chicago. See their advertisement elsewhere.

The Photograph Family Record.

THE PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD is a work that should find a place in every home in the land. It is an elegant Oil Chromo, Photograph Album and Family Record combined, of the highest finish and of most tasteful design. The subject is allegorical in its nature, there are the scenes representing the four principle periods of life, namely, childhood, youth, manhood and old age; these scenes are ingeniously and prettily grouped together and are surrounded by a handsome frame work of blue, gold and flowers, in which there are eight oval openings or spaces of the proper size for the insertion of ordinary photographs. Under these openings are blank spaces for the autographs, dates of birth, etc., of those whose pictures are intended to be placed above. It is a lovely home adornment and a pleasant reminder of the loved ones living and dead. All who have seen it express both pleasure and satisfaction at its beauty and originality of design. The grouping of its figures and the scenery surrounding them are life like and natural. It must be seen to be fully appreciated and understood. Its low price ($1.50) places it within the reach of all. It is mailed, post paid, to any address on receipt of price, by the BEVERLY CO., 973 Wabash Ave. Chicago. See their advertisement in another column.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

One Man Killed and Five Others Wounded by a Blast—The Port Perry Tunnel Completed.

The tunnel of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Port Perry was completed on Thursday night, but unfortunately a fatal accident attended it. The last blast which opened the passage resulted in the death of one of the hands, and the wounding, more or less seriously, of five others. It should be stated that two gangs have been working day and night from both ends, and on the night stated it was expected that they would meet. Mr. R. F. Brendlinger, engineer in charge, as was customary, made an accurate measurement, and found that there was yet wanting a bore of about seven feet. The night turn men were so informed when they went to work, and were cautioned against accidents by blasting. About eleven o'clock, when the accident occurred, there was, it is believed, but three feet between the workmen.

Those of the north heading signalled those of the south that they were about to fire a blast, and a return signal was given that all was ready. The south end men retired some twenty feet, where they supposed themselves perfectly safe. But a huge mass of rock and earth, displaced by the blast, was hurled against them with terrific force, only two out of the eight men employed were not struck by the fragments. A man named Barney was so frightfully mangled that he died without ten minutes after the accident. He was on the left side of the cut, and the flesh was torn and he was literally disemboweled. A man who was standing next to him, and whose name could not be ascertained, was struck in the breast by fragments of rock, and three of the pieces penetrated, leaving ghastly-looking openings. Edward Burns, foreman of the gang, was wounded about his face, his injuries being caused principally by powder. John Nelson, Jr., had the calf of his leg injured, the flesh having been torn off by sharp-pointed rocks. A man named Flannigan was struck on the cheek and the flesh was severely lacerated. One of the two who escaped uninjured, has his hat and lamp knocked off by a flying rock, but escaped without a bruise.

Nelson and the other man who is supposed to be fatally injured, was brought to the city yesterday morning and taken to Mercy Hospital. The latter had been employed on the work only three days, and none of his fellow-workmen could remember his name, nor could they tell anything in relation to him. The man who was killed had been at work three or four weeks, and boarded at McNally's in Port Perry. It is not known whether he was married or not. Coroner McCallin held an inquest during the afternoon on the body of Barney and a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

—The Connecticut Legislature, now in session, is the first Legislative body in that State for twenty years which the Democracy have controlled. The all-absorbing subject is the United States Senatorship, the caucuses for which will be held next Wednesday. Some are pushing the statistician and free trade doctrinaire, David A. Wells; and there are a number of other eager aspirants for the place. The probabilities are, however, that the money-bags of Congressman Barnum, a very wealthy manufacturer, will carry him through.

SALE OF THE SUNBURY AND LEWISTOWN RAILROAD.—At the public sale on the May 5th in Philadelphia was sold whole of the Sunbury and Lewistown Railroad, beginning at the east side of the Susquehanna river, in Northumberland county, opposite Selinsgrove, and ending at Lewistown, Mifflin county, a distance of forty-two miles, together with all its appurtenances, real estate, tracks stations, stock, everything in fact which belonged to the Company. The sale was on account of the foreclosure of a mortgage and the property was knocked down at $551,000, the purchasers being Samuel M. Zulich, Josiah Hart, Daniel Buck, W. Budd Deacon and Thomas D. Thornton. A good many bonds of this company were sold in Chester county: they with the stock are now worthless.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

MONDAY.

The House was not in session. A resolution was introduced into the Senate urging Congress to promptly pass the Centennial appropriation bill.

TUESDAY.

SENATE.—The House resolution for final adjournment on Friday week, the 15th inst., was agreed to. The school bill passed finally, and the judicial salary bill reported.

HOUSE.—A resolution was adopted that no new bill be in order after to morrow. The amendments to the apportionment bill were insisted on and a committee of conference appointed.

WEDNESDAY.

SENATE.—The following bills passed finally: To impose penalties upon employees of railroads and canal companies for selling commodities to the companies employing them and for engaging in the business of common carriers thereof. House bill relative to burial grounds situated in incorporated boroughs. House joint resolution requesting the United States Government to donate Carlisle barracks to the use of the Soldiers Orphan Schools of Pennsylvania. To authorize the Auditor General and State Treasurer to settle all out standing claims due for work done and material furnished the Constitutional Convention. To authorize Robert Cummings, Joseph Harkness and Rev. J. A. McGill, the trustees of the Associate Presbyterian church and congregation at Reedsville, to sell and convey the real estate belonging to said church and congregation, situate in Reedsville, Mifflin county. This bill was opposed by Mr. White as unconstitutional, but finally passed unanimously.

HOUSE.—The following bill, with several others, was reported from the committee negatively, which kills it: A bill to establish a new liquor license law, and virtually repealing the Local Option law, gave rise, on first reading, to a most spirited fight. The motion to dispense with going into Committee of the Whole was negatived, yeas 31, nays 53, and the House went into Committee of the Whole, where the bill was discussed. The yeas and nays cannot be called in Committee, and on a rising vote the bill was negatived, and was so reported to the House. The effect of this action was to bring the House to a direct vote on agreeing to the report of the Committee. If agreed to, the bill would fall, if not agreed to, the rejection of the report would bring the bill again before the House. The vote by yeas and nays resulted, yeas 47, nays 49, the friends of Local Option voting aye. This was a close shave, and on a motion being made by Mr. Webb to postpone the bill for the present, it was agreed to.

[The bill substantially re-enacts the old license law, dividing the dealers into classes paying as follows: First class dealers whose sales exceed $20,000 per annum, license $500; second class sales exceeding $15,000, license $300; third class sales exceeding $10,000 license $150; fourth class exceeding 5,000, license $75; all sales under $5,000 to pay $50 license. The bill also contains a section repealing the Local Option law. It provides no penalty for violation of its provisions, and requires licenses to be granted simply as a matter of course, and not by demanding the usual safeguards and remedies.

THURSDAY.

SENATE.—Mr. White read in place an act to prevent undue discrimination by railroad companies in freight and passengers. The following bills passed finally: To provide for the appointment of officers to fill vacancies in cases not provided for by the Constitution. To provide for the recording of deads by Registers of Wills. To validate the obligations of municipalities issued without authority of law. To enable manufacturing companies to wind up their affairs after the expiration of their charters. At the afternoon session, Mr. White read in place an act providing for the contested elections in the courts. Bills on first and second reading occupied the rest of the session.

HOUSE.—The House took a long calender of bills on second reading this morning, and passed the following to third reading: Mr. Roney, An act to punish commercial agencies for false representations. Mr. Hays, An act committing indigent insane to Dixmont. Mr. Christy, An act making Decoration Day a legal holiday. The act providing for the ganging of oils, which was lost at the morning session, was reconsidered in the afternoon and passed. The act enlarging the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace was voted down. Mr. Gerwig's bill, making the office of Mayor a salaried one, passed the House with the proviso that it should not apply to persons elected. Mr. Newmyer called upon third reading and had passed, the act punishing the employment of children as street musicians. Mr. Stanaham called up the act to repeal the act authorizing the road supervisors of Hickey township, Mercer county, to levy additional road taxes.

FRIDAY.

SENATE.—The following bills passed finally: For the education and maintenance of destitute orphans of deceased soldiers. To define the liability of sureties on written instruments for the payment of money. To provide for a better security of life and property from the dangers of coal and petroleum oil. The rest of the session was devoted to the consideration of House bills.

HOUSE.—The calendar was taken up on second reading. A number of bills were ruled off by Speaker McCormick as being unconstitutional. Bill No. 393, Repealing Local Option all over the State, which passed second reading last night, the vote being fifty-four to thirty-two. Its friends now concede that there will be no chance for it in the Senate. Wallace's City bill occupied two hours in reading and was passed finally. Representative Young has been appointed visitor of the Southwestern Normal College. The School Book bill came from committee to-day. It will have a close "ting" in the House. Arches are being placed over all the principal streets for the army reunions next week.

A WRONG CUSTOM CORRECTED.

It is quite generally the custom to take stong liver stimulants for the cure of liver complaint, and both the mineral and vegetable kingdoms have been diligently searched to procure the most drastic and poisonous purgatives, in order to procure a powerful effect upon the liver, and arouse the lagging and enfeebled organ. This system of treatment is on the same principle as that giving a weak and debilited man large portions of brandy to enable him to do a certain amount of work. When the stimulant is withheld, the organ like the system, gradually relapses into a more torpid or sluggish and weakened condition than before. What then is wanted? Medicines, that, while they cause the bile to flow freely from the liver, as that organ is toned into action, will not overwork, and thus debilitate it, but will, when their use is discontinued, leave the liver strengthened and healthy.

WORKS WONDERS.

BERGEN, Genesee Co., N. Y., March 23, 1871.
Dr R. V. Pierce:

Dear Sir—Your treatment in my case has been quite successful and satisfactory, and for which I desire to express my gratitude. I have been troubled with a disordered Liver and Catarrh and general weakness for a good many years, and was falling slowly all the time, and last August I called on you and got some of your Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and one of your Nasal Injectors, and since that time I have been improving and am now better than I have been in years, not having had the sick headache in months, which I used to have to average once a week, the Golden Medical Discovery being the principal medicine. It has worked wonders in my case, and I recommend it to those similarly afflicted. Let me express gratitude to you for such invaluable services.

Truly and gratefully yours,
WM. F. CRITTENDON.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

—Wood's Household Magazine, for May, has an abundance of excellent reading.—There is the real go-ahead snap to this periodical which entitles it to much credit, and we cannot name one that will afford an equal amount of entertainment and instruction for so little money. The number before us contains among other articles a paper entitled "Poor Jack," by F. W. Holland, in the interest of seamen; "The Child in the Church," by Mary Hartwell; "Kin and Kad," by F. V. Osborne; "Dumb Days," by Caroline B. LeRow, and some good poetry. There are, several illustrated articles, the New York Fashions, Architectual Designs, &c., &c. The illustrations on Decoration Day is just the thing. Price of Magazine one dollar per year.

Address,
WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE,
Newburg, N. Y.

—The May Aldine is as fresh and beautiful as the month it represents; filled to the brim with choice flowers of art and literature. The engravings, which in this superb monthly seem to have reached the highest point of perfection, are beautiful beyond anything heretofore seen in an illustrated Magazine. John S. Davis opens the number with a full page picture, "The Dying Hound," which is one of his best efforts, a strong work, showing that it is a study from real life. J. D. Woodward contributes three large and spiritedly drawn pictures of scenes in Florida, one of the most beautiful and picturesque States in the Union. The first picture of the series is a deliciously cool view of the famous Silver Spring, which boils up from the earth; the second picture is a handsome full page illustration of the month of the St. John's River, showing the ruins of the old light-house, a grove of palm trees, etc.; the third picture is a wild and dreamy view of a Florida hummock, one of those strange emerald islands in the midst of a desert of sands. Two other handsome and interesting pictures are 'A Retriever,' after Deiker, and "The Bashful Lover," by J. M. Burfield. "Up Springs the Lark," is the title of a charming little view, exceedingly appropriate for spring time. John Howe has a full-page illustration, striking for its boldness, called the "Hemlock of Ostego," showing a group of those great trees upon the shores of that famous lake. "The New Capital at Hartford, Conn.," is a finely executed drawing of the large and ornate building now in process of erection at Hartford, at the cost of several millions of dollars. The last illustration in this number is an excellent portrait of Max Strakosch, the impresario, so well known in connection with Italian opera in this country. James Sutton & Co., publishers, 58 Maiden Lane, New York City.

—Church's Monthly Visitor has a right to claim that it is the magazine for musical people. Its mechanical appearance, always attractive, has been greatly improved, and its publishers challenge a comparison with any similar publication, either American or Foreign. The Visitor contains thirty-two pages filled with an entertaining variety of matter, original stories, musical sketches, poetry, humorous reviews and all matters of general interest to musical people. Besides this the music alone in each volume of the Visitor would cost in sheet form between $15 and $20, while it is furnished for only $1.50 a year, with a chromo, alone worth the price of the magazine. The publishers will send a specimen copy containing over $1 worth of music free on application. Address, JOHN CHURCH & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

—People who have short necks should endeavor to make them appear longer by all possible means; turn-down collars and open bodices will suit them; others, on the contrary, will only gain by adopting high collars and stand-up collarettes. It is the same with blondes and brunettes, who should never dress their hair the same way: blondes are charming with the hair frizzed in close, crisp waves; neither oil nor pomatum should ever be put on fair hair, nothing but powder. The hair of brunettes, on the contrary, should be smooth and brilliant; long repentirs, broad undulations, a l'eau; these will suit them; frizzed black is frightful. Outre and absurb as many of the finest straw and chip bonnets seem as they come from the block, yet a few touches will frequently transform them into the most becoming and graceful designs; while, on the other hand, trimmings overloaded, or ornaments badly placed, destroyes all outline and vulgarises the choicest materials.

Fine white straws, fine white and black chip, black lace over crape or net, sheer muslin over delicate shades of silk—these are the principal materials of later spring and summer bonnets.

Embroidered chips are among the novelties, revived from fifteen years, and now as then they are richly wrought with silk and jet. But, instead of detached figures and firnges, the embroidery is executed in bands and borders, and is accompanied by trimmings and ornaments, which with the addition of plaitings of crepe lisse, and the usual elastic, complete elegant though costly bonnets.—From Demorest's Monthly for May

GREAT DISCOVERY!

E. F. KUNKEL'S BITTER WINE of IRON. For the cure of weak stomach, general debility indigestion, disease of the nervous system, constipation acidity of the stomach, and all cases requiring a tonic,

The wine includes the most agreeable and efficient salt of Iron we possess; Citrate of Magnetic Oxide, combined with the most energetic of vegetable tonics, Yellow Peruvian Bark.

The effect in many cases of debility, loss of appetite, and general prostration, of an efficient Salt of Iron combined with our valuable Nerve, is most happy. It augments the appetite raises the pulse, takes off muscular flabbiness, removes the pallor debility, and gives a florid vigor to the countenance.

Do you want something to strengthen you? Do you want a good appetite? Do you want to build up your constitution? Do you want to feel well? Do you want to get rid of nervousness? Do you want energy? Do you want to sleep well? Do you want brisk and vigorous feelings? If you do, try Kunkel's Wine of Iron.

This truly valuable tonic has been so thoroughly tested by all classes of the community, that it is now deemed indispensible as a Tonic medicine. It costs but little, purifies the blood and gives tone to the stomach, renovates the the system and prolongs life.

I now only ask a trial of this valuable Tonic. Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, Philadelphia, Pa.

BE WISE TO-DAY.—'Tis madness to neglect a cough or cold, however slight. Consumption may follow, and though Dr. Wistar's Balsom of Wild Cherry has frequently cured this much dreaded disease, it almost invariably cures the primary disease of the throat, lungs and chest, where other remedies fail.

THE Times says Dr. Walpole has lost his beautiful mare. She died suddenly in harness, it is supposed from bots or pin worms. If the Doctor had used Sheriden's Cavalry Condition Powders, he would, no doubt, have had his mare to-day—they are death on worms.

Chapped hands are very common with those who have their hands much in water. A few drops of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment rubbed over the hands two or three times a day, will keep them soft and white. Fishermen, sailors and others will do well to remember this.

SATURATE A PIECE OF BREAD OF MEAT with gastric juice, and it will dissolve. This is digestion. Add to such a mixture a little alcohol, and it will not dissolve. This is indigestion.—Beware, then, of tinctures, or tonics, or decoctions containing spirituous liquors. Shun all rum "tonics," and rely solely on Dr. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, the finest digestive invigorant known, and free from the fiery curse of Alcohol. 15-4w

EAGLEVILLE HOTEL.
EAGLEVILLE, CENTRE CO., PA.
SAMUEL H. KUNES, Proprietor.

Having purchased the old Daniel Kunes stand, I have entirely refitted and overhauled the house, and put it in first class order, and have made it one of the best hotels in Centre County. Large and commodious stables are in connection with the house, and teams will be faithfully and carefully attended to. A good board walk has been constructed from the depot to the Eagleville Hotel, and, it being away from the depot a convenient distance, it is the most desirable and pleasant hotel in Eagleville for the travelling public.

T. S. ARTHUR'S

NEW AND GREAT TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN BOOK!

Woman to the Rescue!

A STORY OF "THE NEW CRUSADE!"

PRICE, $1.25.

JUST PUBLISHED, AND FOR SALE

By Agents all over the Country.

This new story by Mr. Arthur tells in a rapid and stirring narrative how in an American town of five thousand inhabitants, the women organized their forces, moved upon their common enemy with a courage and impetuosity that demoralized him at the first outset, and drove him out in less than a week.

No one can read this new book without being startled and aroused by its stern portrayal of the helpless and hopeless condition of our towns and cities under the rule of a Rum Dynasty.

No one can read it without seeing how utterly man has failed in his efforts to overthrow this Dynasty, which robs and exhausts the people with a cruel and insatiate greed more ruthless than that of any of the robber knights in the middle ages.

No one can read it without feeling that in this new and wonderful uprising of the women, God is working for the overthow of intemperance by new and subtile forces, against which the old defences of a "traffic," which has cursed the people with untold miseries, crumble and fall like barriers of sand.

No one can read it without a profound respect and sympathy for the heart-breaking women, who, despairing of help in man, are now crying mightily to God all over the land

Its wide circulation will help the cause immensely, and aid in giving to the new movement a character and strength that will make it well nigh irresistible.

HOLYHOCKS.

"A flaunting graceless flower!" you say?
Ah well! it may be so,
And still—
It seemed but yesterday,
That morning long ago!
I almost see the cottage yet,
The winding path—and Margaret.

Dew-drops strung close on cobweb treads,
Gleamed in the door-yard grass,
And from prim-lined garden-beds
Smiled up to see us pass.
Sweet, old-time blossoms, greeting thus
A fairer flower, unenvious.

We rested in the arbor-shade,
While through the open door
Sto'e bashful sun-beams, half-afraid,
And played upon the floor;
Or, bolder grown, with brightness fleet,
Touched her soft hair and forehead sweet.

A light-winged breeze sailed gently by;
The lark's clear note afar
Through the blue spaces of the sky
Sailed like a falling star;—
I never saw her look so fair!
Ah! if I told her, would she care,

Within a scarlet holyhock
A pollen-laden bee
Deep plunging, made the blossom rock
She flashed a smile at me!
And with a motion swift and light,
She caught the silken petals tight.

Loud hummed the bee with angry wing,—
"Why thus so ill content?
The sweets you sought, poor foolish thing,"
She said, "are all unspent!"
My heart leaped up to hear her speak,
A sudden courage dyed my cheek.

"Darling!" I cried, "O let him fly!
And take me in his place!
Fast prisoned in your heart, could I
Ask any sweeter grace?
I could not struggle to be free,
So dear a jailer hold the key!"

Her cheek flushed like an opening rose,
No word her lips did say—
I saw her little hand unclose,
The glad bee flew away.
Ah me! 'twas forty years ago—
My hair is gray—yet this I know:

I've roamed through many garden bowers,
And many blooming fields since then—
In summer wild-wood gathered flowers,
And in the mountain glen
Pulled harebells from the moss-grown rock—
Yet most I love the hollyhock!

SPRING.

BY E. L. GRAY.

Warm breezes sweep o'er the distant hills,
The snow has all melted away;
And the little sparkling mountain rills,
Dash along in idle play.

The grass is green in the meadow;
And circling through the air,
Can be seen the twittering swallow,
Racing as it were in pair.

The woods resound with cheerful notes
As hopping from limb to limb,
The little wood thrush clears its throat,
And warbles a lay for Spring.

As I sit and gaze on the mountain side,
And watch the hurrying brook;
The frolicking squirrel o'er the fence doth glide,
In search of some shady nook.

I love to lie down on some mossy bed
And listen to the twitter of birds,
While the sun in the West, sinks fiery red,
And naught but their songs are heard.

O, beautiful spring—in sunshine clad,
Decked out in gorgeous array;
In winter the heart grows weary and sad,
In summer both happy and gay.

Our Story Teller.

GOING HOME.

A wet, dismal night—a night when, tempted by the first warm days of Spring, people who had left off fires looked dubiously at their polished grates, and shuddered as the rain beat heavily against the windows and the wind howled in the chimneys—a night when not a star was visible, when the gaslights flickered and fluttered in a misty, uncertain manner, and the pavement was covered with a greasy agglutination of slime and mud—a night when sudden gusts took pedestrians almost off their feet, and sent the blinding drizzle into their faces till they could scarcely see their way; when umbrellas were a myth, and waterproofs a fond delusion; and a light fog, strongly suggestive of sore throats and reumathism, hung over the marshy districts of London.

Three o' clock in the morning, and on Waterloo Bridge—silence over the great city—the great dark hive that loomed so grimly against the liden sky, while the busy brains of ever-restless men kept feverish watches through the still small hours.

Not a sound save the splash, splash of the river, as it swept under the cold stone arches, sucking and licking the piers with its fetid, hungry tongues; the distant rumble of a market-wagon or a home-returning cab; or the chimes of the city churches, telling how time was passing away.

And a woman, weary and foot-sore, with garments that hardly protected her from the rain, a shawl so thin and ragged that it required all the strength left in her long, lean arms to prevent its being blown away, offered a silver threepence to the toll-man at the gate.

A bright fire was blazing in the little room—cosy and warm it looked compared with the dreariness without; and the man, as he held his coat tight up in his neck to shield him from the piercing blast, looked askance at the way-farer who had interrupted him.

He was used to these tramps: they would sleep in the recesses of the bridge on the warm summer nights—ay, and in the bitter winter, too; they swarmed on the water steps, where they lay huddled together, old and young, a loathsome, hideous mass. He had grown quite accustomed to the tide of human misery that crept so closely to the dark silent river. Did they think those poor effects of humanity, that when life was too hard even for them to bear, there was rest beneath those cold, turpid waters, a home somewhere below their Stygian obscurity?

He was wont too see all phases of sublurary wretchedness and vice; yet something in this woman's hurried manner, her evident desire to be unnoticed ad the lateness of the hour, caused im to look closely at her before delivering her change. She didn't seem exactly like a pauper; there were signs of delicacy and better days in the white, scared face, whose outline he could scarcely catch through the dark weavy hair, which has pushed in such disorder beneath the faded bonnet.

He was a kind-hearted man, one who had gone through suffering himself.

'It's a bad night for you to be out in, my girl; a terrible bad night.'

The woman drew her shawl tighter round her shivering form.

'You needn't tell me that,' she replied with a ghastly smile; 'I know that as well as you.'

'Take care you don't get blown over the bridge,' returned the man; 'there's wind enough to do it.'

'There's no such luck,' retorted she bitterly. 'Death don't come to those who seek it.'

'Well, it's a bad look-out when one wants to seek it. I suppose you're going home?' This was a side hit.

The woman drew herself up.

'What's that to you?' she flared out. 'What business is it of yours where I'm going? Can't you give me the money and let me go, and not keep me here in this villainous rain?'

'Well, you needn't be so sharp. Surely a fellow could ask a civil question without being snapped up like that. It ain't no matter to me where you goes.'

'Then what did you ask for?' she retorted, impatiently, taking the coppers; then, as if she regretted her rudeness, she said more gently: 'Yes, I am going home, that will satisfy you—such a home as it is. Good-night, old fellow.'

The wind and the rain shut the door for him; the wind and the rain beat against the toll-house windows, like angry spirits clamorous for entrance, and the wind and the rain sent the poor wanderer far on the bridge out of his sight.

He sat down again in his wooden arm-chair beside the genial fire. He could not rest, however, but started nervously as the north wind howled louder round his little cabin, or a sound to which his fancy gave a hideous shape fell on his listening ear.

Twice he rose, and peered out through the misty panes of glass that constituted the toll-house windows, as if he could see anything but the drops of rain that trickled in miniature rivulets down the dim transparency; as if he could see anything but the murky darkness, the bitter cruel night.

'I wish I'd follered her,' he muttered to himself; 'I'm blest if I don't. It's queer to me if she ain't a rum un; but, dash it! what's a feller to do?'

He couldn't run after every tramp that chose to go over the bridge, he thought. With this reflection he endeavored to soothe the uneasy mind that would not allow him to be at peace.

And the woman or girl—for in spite of her squalor and misery she looked youthful—even now—sped swiftly on till she reached the middle of the bridge. There was no one to stay her; the recesses were all deserted; she was there in the darkness, silence, and the rain, as lonely as though she were in an eastern desert. Alone in the very heart of London, midway between those two great masses of habitations that stretch on either side the wonderful river. To her left, amidst the gaunt, tall houses, whose reflection made the waters blacker still, towered St. Paul's Cathedral, England's heroes' mausoleum; while far above, far past the graceful bridges, with their avenues of twinkling lights, lay the old Abbey, in the solemn shadow of its sanctuary, like a voice from the past with the holiness of ages around it. There were lights in many a window yet, telling of those for whom there is no night—the sick, the dying and overpressed—telling of those to whom night brings no repose no significance, but a season for harder work filched from the over-excited brain.

The silence was all exterior. She knew well, vagrant as she was, that there are hundreds of dwellings in which night is the real day, during which men work and toil and fight, conquer and fall, in the great battle of life. She knew, God alone knows how bitterly, that Hell held high carnival during those midnight hours, and that while the innocent and good slept the calm sleep of the just, devils incarnate laughed over the ruin of immortal souls.

But all this was nothing now to her. There was no hand, devil's or angel's, stretched forth to help her in her fearful need. She stood for a moment on the parapet, her hands—those thin, attenuated hands—clenched tightly together.

There might be a better world, she thought; there couldn't be a worse. The God who made her would forgive her if she were doing wrong. And a wild scream mingled with the soughing wind, as the cold waters parted for a moment, and they went rippling, splashing on, over a broken heart.

A policeman heard the scream as he stood at the other end of the bridge, vainly endeavoring to shield himself from the storm. He turned his bull's-eye on, and looked up and down the road. Some poor "unfortunate," he thought, engaged in a drunken drawl. Best to let her fight it out herself; he would get no good by interference.

A bargeman heard that scream as he lay dozing in his barge. It seemed to sound close to his ear.

And the angels of God heard that scream as they hovered over the sin-stained city, and they bore it upward on their snowy wings through immeasurable space, through the golden floods of light that, far beyond all human thought, irradiate the confines of eternal bliss, till it woke the echoes of unutterable love at the mercy-gate of Heaven.

A fortnight later, and another night in London—a soft, balmy, spring night, when myriads of glittering stars lighted the Heavens with their beauty, and shone down upon the sleeping earth like the eye of an ever-watchful Providence—a night when hundreds of pedestrians thronged the brilliant, busy streets, when carriages full of lovely women rolled along the causeways and through the squares, and sin flaunted its paint and feathers in the finest thoroughfares of virtuous London—a night when the clubs of the West-End were all illuminated, and handsome dissolute men stood on the steps or at the open windows, discussing the last, new opera or the character of their female friends—when in the alleys and corners of the old metropolis small thieves, with children's bodies, and old, cunning faces, plied their unlawful trade, and from out the meretricious splendor of the gin palaces that, like enchanted mansions in the Arabian Nights, seemed doubly dazzling amid the dinginess around, rose discordant voices, hellish laughter, mingled with the poor, still air.

There were lights in one of the large houses in Belgrave-square; a carriage and pair stood before the door, and in one of the splendidly-furnished drawing-rooms within sat a young girl, dressed for a ball, fastening the buttons of her tiny gloves. She was very fair—fair with the pale Saxon beauty so distinctive of our race; a delicate, aristocratic face, large, dreamy, pansy eyes, and lustrous wavy hair, falling over the white, shimmering silken robes, like golden sunshine on the snowclad Alps.

'Beautiful exceedingly' she seemed; and so the fine, tall man thought—her brother evidently, by the likeness between them—as he entered the room and stood for a moment gazing at her.

He smiled approvingly as, taking up her fan and bouquet, she advanced to meet him; and then a shadow of something like anxiety fell over his face. It was gone, however, in an instant.

'I am afraid we shall be late, Constance; it is nearly twelve now; and Lady Churchill begged us to come early.'

'I am ready, William,' she replied; 'but there's plenty of time. We shall be weary enough before it is over.' And she shrugged her shoulders with a charming gesture of indifference.

'No revel is complete without its queen,' replied her brother, gallantly. 'Your adorers will have been fuming themselves to death for the last two hours, fearing you would not come.'

'It will do them good,' she replied, with a laugh: 'they will learn wisdom in time.'

'And Sir Richard?' questioned her brother, looking earnestly into her smiling face.

She crisoned—a flush of anger, not of love, and turned impatiently away.

'Sir Richard may wait forever. He has had his answer already.'

Her brother bites his lips.

'I think you are foolish, Constance. Sir Richard loves you, and would make you a very good match.'

Constance twined her hands around her brother's arm, tears trembling in her eyes.

'I shall never marry, William—never. Please don't ask me, dear. I am very happy here with you.'

He stooped and kissed the piteous face that was turned so timidly up to his.

'There! Don't spoil your pretty eyes he cried; 'some one will induce you to change that resolution I hope.'

He drew her hand within his arm, and led her down the broad staircase into the hall, where a powdered footman stood with wraps upon his arm, ready to see them into the carriage.

The street door was partly open, and a noise of altercation and rough voices speaking sharply caused the gentleman to hesitate.

'What is the meaning of this disturbance, Barnes?' he asked.

'It is a man, Sir, as is himperant, and won't go away; and John is making him.'

'What does the fellow want? What business has he here?'

'He says he wants to see Miss Power, Sir.'

'To see me?' exclaimed Constance, while her brother frowned.

'To see Miss Power? What insufferable insolence! And at this time of night too!'

'He is most howdacious, Sir, and says he knowed she was a-coming out, and would stop till she did.'

'Constance, my love,' said Mr. Power, 'you had better step into the library. I will soon settle this affair.'

He opened the room door for her, and then going out on the steps, stood for a moment in angry amazement at the scene before him.

An old man, bareheaded, was struggling with two of the men-servants of the house, gesticulating violently, while a small crowd of curious listeners, collected by the uproar, were grinning and laughing and shouting to the combatants to have fair play.

'I will see her! I will see her!' the old man was exclaiming. 'It's a matter of life and death, and I'll stop till I do.'

'John, go for the police!' shouted the stentorian voice of Mr. Power.

At the sound of their master's voice the men let go their hold of the man, while four or five young urchins started off in search of the missing functionary. The old man, half exhausted, staggered to the palings.

'Don't send for the police,' he cried; 'I ain't a-going to rob. For God's sake, Sir, tell me if the young lady is coming out!' This is to Mr. Power.

'What business is this of yours?' angrily replied that gentleman. 'How dare you create a disturbance in a respectable neighborhood? I will have you imprisoned.'

'Prison me if you will,' cried the man earnestly; 'but let me speak one word to the young lady, Sir, for the love of Heaven.'

'The man is mad,' muttered Mr. Power to himself; 'mad or drunk.'

The old fellow caught the last words.

'No, I ain't drunk, yer honner,' he cried; 'I earns an honest livelihood, and that's more than every flunky can say;' and he glanced indignantly at the footmen, who still kept by his side. 'I'm in my sober senses, and I know what I want. I want to see Miss Power.'

'It is one of those beggarly paupers Constance is so fond of,' thought Mr. Power. 'This is the fruit of ladies going about visiting the sick—a precious piece of business, to the sure. If you will promise to go away quietly, I will let you off,' he commenced; but at that moment a hand was placed upon his arm, and a soft voice questioned;

'What is the matter, William?'

At the door stood Constance, in her snowy opera-cloak and golden hair, her sweet eyes turned wonderingly on the spectacle before her.

With a cry of joy the old man struggled up the steps.

'O Miss! are you Miss Power? It's you I wants to see.'

Mr. Power drew her angrily back.

'Really, Constance,' he said in a low tone, 'you are forgetting yourself. To come out here before all this people—really—'

'O William,' cried the girl, 'don't be cross; but Barnes tells me the man said it was a matter of life and death. Do let me see him if only for a moment. It must be something very serious to bring him at this hour of the night.'

Mr. Power, though hasty in his temper, was a just and reasonable man; he saw plainly now the man was not intoxicated, and though he was annoyed at being disturbed at this unseasonable hour, he could not but acknowledge the fitness of his sister's argument, and that the man was at least entitled to a hearing.

'Well, Connie,' he said, 'let it be so. Go back into the library, and I will question him first myself.'

He told the footman to call the man inside, and close the door. After a while, Mr. Power came back to his sister.

'I cannot make him out,' he said, in answer to her anxious glance. 'He tells a rambling story about some girl he has picked out of the water, and whom, he says, you know. You had better see him, Constance.'

'O yes, yes! Ask him to come in at once.'

He was an old gray-haired man, whose garments betokened extreme poverty, but whose face looked honest and sincere, despite the flush that excitement had given it.

'Are you Miss Power—Miss Constance Power?' he exclaimed hurriedly, without waiting for her to speak.

'Yes, I am Constance Power; what can I do for you.'

'O, then, if you be her, I was to give your ladyship this bit of paper,' taking a dirty scrap of paper from his pocket; 'and you will have to make haste, please, if you want to see her alive.'

Constance opened it in profound astonishment which increased to a look of intense horror as she read the contents.

'I am dying, dying fast,' it said, 'but I cannot go till I have told you what is on my mind. Please don't refuse, but come as quickly as you can. The whole happiness of your future life depends on your seeing PAULINE BARRY.'

'O my poor Pauline!' exclaimed Miss Power. 'The girl that left me so suddenly four years ago. Where is she, my good man? I will go at once.'

'She's in my house, my lady, close by the water-side. She had been and drowned herself, and I picked her up, and me and my misses has minded her over since; they'd have taken her to prison if we had peached on her, Miss, you know, and she is so quiet and good; and the doctor has been so very good to us, and given us a bit of money, and—'

'Yes, yes,' interrupted the trembling girl; 'you shall tell me all about it as we go.'

'Nonsense, Constance!' exclaimed Mr. Power, 'who is this Pauline you are talking about.'

'Have you forgotten her, William?—the girl who was my companion when poor papa died. Ah, I forgot; she left us just as you returned from abroad; but you must have heard me speak of Pauline Barry. I loved her like a sister. She is ill—dying; I must go to her at once.'

'You will do nothing of the sort,' retorted her brother. 'I shall not allow you to be so foolish.'

'I will—I must!' she said; and the little white teeth were set determinedly, and a strange defiance flashed in the violet eyes. 'It will be too late in the morning.'

'You will go, and in these trappings!' and he pointed contemptuously to the clouds of lace that floated round her fairy form, the pearls and opals gleaming on her fair white neck and arms, and in the tresses of amber hair.'

'I will cover them all over with my large waterproof cloak,' she said entreatingly. 'No one will recognize me, and Phillips can go with me.'

'And I also, if you will be so insane.'

'No, no; you would only be in the way!' she exclaimed, hurriedly. 'Do be sensible darling; I am not afraid with Phillips. Be quick, dear, and ring the bell; every moment may be too late.'

'And it will, Miss,' cried the man, respectfully, 'if we don't look sharp. My misses said as how she couldn't last very long.'

'You are decidedly out of your mind, Constance,' said Mr. Power, when he saw she was determined; 'going off at this time of night to listen to the rhapsodies of a dying man.'

'Which is the most mad,' she retorted, flushing—'wasting God's holy time in frivolous amusements, or soothing the last hours of the souls for whom he died.

Mr. Power shrugged his shoulders.

"As you please," he cried; 'but I insist on your taking one of the men with you as well. I will send away the carriage; you had better have a cub, it will attract less attention."

A short time afterward a cab drew up before a dingy-looking house in a narrow dirty street running parallel with the river, on the south side of the Thames, and a man descending from the box, assisted a veiled and muffled figure to alight.

"Wait for me here," said Constance in a whisper to her maid; "there is no occasion for you to come inside."

"But master said, Miss—"

"I am your mistress," replied Constance haughtily; "do as you are told."

The girl shrunk back; to tell the truth, she was quite as ready to stop as to go, far preferring a chat with the footman to witnessing the death struggles of the poor; she saw plenty of that when Miss Power dragged her into the loathsome alleys and wretched streets to be found even in Belgrave.

The old man—Parker, he said his name was—opened the door by means of a string pulled through a hole. No need of bolts and bars there, except to keep the thieves inside when justice demanded them.

"Mind the step, my lady," he said. "It's not very often the likes of you come to such a place as this."

"I'm not afraid," said Constance gently; yet as she spoke she trembled, and her heart sank at the impenetrable darkness before her.

The noise they made had evidently been heard, for a door opened, and a woman came cautiously down the stairs carrying a swealing candle in a broken candlestick.

"Is that you Jim?" she called in a loud whisper.

"Ah, my gal; and I've brought the lady with me."

"That's right," cried the woman.

And Constance found herself face to face with a poorly-dressed but motherly-looking woman.

"How is she?" was her first question.

"Very badly, Miss; very badly. She's been and dropped into a doze; but they say she can't last till morn. She's been asking for you Miss, all night long.'

Up two flights of creaking, rickety stairs, and then they stopped at a door in the back of the house, which the woman opened, and, holding the light above her head, suffered Constance to pass through first. A dirty blanket thrown over an old clothes-horse served as a screen to prevent the drafts that whistled through the crannies of the door from reaching the bed, on which lay the pallid form of the dying woman, breathing heavily. The tears rolled down Constance's fair cheeks as she gazed on the altered features, the thin, wasted figure of one who when last she beheld her, was radiant with youth and health. Large drops of perspiration stood on her forehead; her nose was drawn and pinched, her eyes sunken, her lips livid and swollen with fever, her hair lay in a dark tangled mass around her haggard face, over which was gradually creeping that mysterious ashen gray—the bridal-veil of death.

'She has suffered a deal, poor dear!' said the woman in a low tone; 'it will be a blessing when the Lord is pleased to take her. Will you sit down Miss?'

She wiped a chair for her visitor, and then, leaving the candle on the table near, stole quietly out of the room.

Constance looked around, and shuddered. Bare boards, a broken table, two more broken chairs, some wooden boxes piled in a corner to form a cupboard, a rusty fender and a row of sauce-pans, jugs, and physic-bottles, were all the furniture of this miserable abode. Across the rooms on a line composed of pieces of rope knotted together, hung some indescribable articles of human clothing (there is no fashion book for the poor,) and in the midst of all this squalor and poverty, three pots of white and purple hyacinths stood in the narrow window-sill, filling the air with their delicious fragrance.

As she looked she thought how from the simple hearts of those poor people rose up daily, like the incense of the flowers, the sweet perfume of a noble self-dying charity, the whiteness of truth and the purple of sacrifice, to the feet of the living God.

Suddenly the dying girl started convulsively, and opened her large dark eyes,

'Who is that?' she cried wildly, as her gaze fell on Miss Power's muffled form.

'I, Constance Power, your friend, Pauline. O my poor girl, what has brought you to this?'

'What has brought me? The blackest hearted villain that ever trod God's earth. Thank Heaven, you have come! O, how terrified I was that they would not find you! I can die—I can die happy now.'

Constance was terribly affected, her tears rolled over the thin wasted hand she held then in hers, while she strove to comfort the unhappy woman.

'Hush don't excite yourself,' she cried: 'you shall tell me all about it by-and-by. How often I have thought about you, dear Pauline, and wondered why you left us so mysteriously?'

'Yes I will tell you all,' replied Pauline, striving to raise herself in bed; 'I must be quick. I know there's not much time.' Then she snatched her hand from Miss Power's grasp. 'Don't touch me,' she cried; 'I'm not fit to be touched by you. Miss Constance, you were always good—do you think God pardons such as I?'

'Of course He does,' replied Constance, weeping. 'There are none so vile that His mercy cannot reach, if they only repent.'

'I think I've repented,' murmured the girl. 'If I had been spared, I would have led a different life. They told you didn't they, I tried to drown myself? It was an awful sin; but I was driven mad. Yes, I'm sorry now, Miss Constance. They have been so kind to me here—the poor old man and his wife. And they showed me how wicked and wrong I was for wishing to take my life; and I want to repair—Hush! what is that?,

Constance listened, but heard nothing; she had been too engrossed with the poor sufferer to heed extraneous noises.

'It is nothing, dear.'

'I thought I heard a step,' muttered Pauline, speaking with difficulty. 'O this pain—if it would but cease!'

She fell back exhausted; and Constance held a teacup, containing a little cordial, to her lips; it revived her, and she opened her eyes once more.

In her agitation and anxiety, the hood of Constance's cloak had fallen back, and the sweet, fair face, with its halo of golden hair, was revealed to Pauline's view.

'Take it all off,' she said presently; 'I want to see you as you are.'

With a blush at the strange request, and yet not liking to refuse the dying woman, Miss Power undid the clasp and and let the cloak fall to her feet.

Pauline gazed at her for awhile in silence, excitement working in her features.

'You are very beautiful,' she said at last; 'more beautiful than ever. Miss Power, I have ruined all your life. Can you forgive me?'

Constance thought she was wandering in head, and laid her hand soothingly upon her.

'My poor Pauline,' she cried, 'what have I to forgive? If you could but be moved from here, perhaps you might get better, and then—'

But the girl laughed a wild, horse laugh.

'I am dying,' she cried, 'dying fast; I only hope I shall live long enough to tell you all. Take away your hand, it burns me; I cannot bear—'

And again she fell exhausted on the pillow.

Presently she spoke again, and the words she uttered caused Miss Power to start and tremble, while the blood rushed to her face.

"You had a lover once—Captain Stapleton?"

'Ah, yes, you knew—but what of him? He never loved me Pauline;" and the sweet face was bowed in her jewelled fingers.

COSMOLINE is the concentrated extract of the healing properties of Petroleum, which are known. It is the most bland and soothing remedy ever used; beside possessing more healing power than any substance or compound ever prepared. It is for almost all the daily casualties which occur in household, the workshop, or on the farm, as well as for many of the diseases which afflict humanity.

Nature's Sovereign Remedy

FOR BURNS AND SCALDS

It is invaluable, cooling and soothing the injured parts at once, and producing a perfect cure in a very short time, without leaving any scars. For this purpose alone, it is

A BLESSING TO THE WORLD.

FOR FROSTED LIMBS, COSMOLINE is fully as efficacious as for burns and scalds, restoring a healthy action to the injured parts very quickly. It is also the best possible remedy for Chilblains and Chapped Hands.

FOR RHEUMATISM especially Inflammatory, most forms of NEURALGIA, swelling of Limbs or Glands, COSMOLINE affords in the shortest possible time the

HAPPIEST RELIEF.

On CUTS AND BRUISES, the action of COSMOLINE is almost magical. If promptly applied, it prevents soreness, and the wounds heal very rapidly.

FOR SKIN DISEASES we can recommend it with the greatest confidence, especially for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema etc., and Teething humours.

We might go on enumerating the many other conditions for which it is unequalled, but will only add that wherever there is inflammation from any cause, COSMOLINE brings a rapid and happy relief, and will be the dependence under all circumstances. COSMOLINE is Prescribed by the best physicians, both allopathic and homeopathic. It is

HOUSEHOLD SURGEON'S

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

——The Musical Entertainment given by the Public schools last Monday evening. is highly complimented by all who enjoyed the pleasure of hearing it. Much credit is due to Prof. Hastings for the untiring energy which he has displayed in pushing forward this work, together with the calls he had in other directions. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity. The different classes were dressed in different colors, white predominating, and as the entertainment was about to close, diplomas were awarded to those who had passed the best examination in all branches. Appropriate remarks were made to the school by A. O. Furst, Prest. of the School Board. Reports were also read by A. O. Furst, Esq., and H. Y. Stitzer, Esq. We will give a full detailed account of the affair next week.

——The General Council of Grangers for Centre Co. met at Centre Hall last Wednesday. There were delegates present from the different local granges, and we understand that the meeting was quite large and harmony and good will prevailed, an evidence that the order is prospering and gaining in numbers and influence in this county. Having been ourselves of late years engaged in farming, we know something of the difficulties under which the farmers labor in their efforts to overcome the continual aggressions of the monopolies and combinations among other classes of industry, and we believe there is no possible way to overcome them, or receive justice at their hands except by unity of efforts, in other words they must meet combined effort with its own effective weapons.

There are no class of men in the country who more literally earn their bread by the sweet of their brows than the farmer, and in the past there has seemed to be no class so poorly paid. It is therefore high time that the farmers took matters into their own hands, far too long have they been compelled to pay for everything they wanted to buy the highest prices, an article which actually cost but ten dollars has been sold to them for thirty while they have been forced to accept from others only such prices as they were inclined to pay for their wheat and corn and all the other products of the farm being barely sufficient to pay the actual cost of production. We are not prepared to say whether the grange is the best form of organization or not, but from our own past experience, we are certain that if the farmers look to their own interest they will combine. Remember farmers of Centre Co., "in union there is strength."

CURTIN TOWNSHIP.—I closed my school on the 16th of April, had but few visitors; only about one tenth as many as we should have had; its true, it was a little disagreeable to be out part of the day, but that was no excuse for parents staying at home. The trouble was as it is in many other places, and I am sorry indeed that it is so, it is not because they don't love their children but because they love money more.

There is no better material in the State of Pennsylvania for turning out a set of bright scholars than there is at school No. seven in Curtin Township. If the parents take the interest in the wellfare of their children that they should, by another year they can surpass any country school in the County.

I closed with a public examination in which several of the pupils deserve much praise; my best pupil in mathematics was Gibson Packer who will no doubt in some future day be found among the most learned men of our nation, he is but thirteen years of age and will soon be able to lay aside most of the common branches and take up the higher and more difficult. Sadie Bechdel was best in Grammar and political Geography, who did admirably well on examination in all her branches. Emma Bechdel received the prize as best in spelling, Primary Geography and Arithmetic in her class, Mary McCloskey received the prize as best speller in the second class. Those that were able I had spell on slates. Out of five thousand three hundred words, Emma Bechdel missed fifteen, Sadie Bechdel nineteen, Gibson Packer nineteen out of four thousand eight hundred.

THOMAS DELONG.

——Our pleasant and genial friend Samuel H. Kunes of Eagleville was among the many visitors who called in to see us during court week. He informed us he had recently purchased the hotel known as the old Daniel Kunes stand, and intends to keep a first class hotel. He has entirely refitted the house secured the best of cooks and will give his undivided attention to the comfort of his guests. Large and well arranged stables are in connection with the house and teams will be well fed and kindly treated. A new board walk has just been constructed from the depot to the house which is pleasantly situated in the business part of the town and far enough from the depot to be away from the noise and smoke of the passing trains. Mr. Kunes is a pleasant whole-souled man, and no doubt will make a first class host. We wish him success. Our readers can see what he says for himself by referring to his advertisement in another column.

——The Security, Fire Ins. Co. of New York, which had to close up its business in the latter part of the year 1871 on account of the great losses they sustained by the disastrous fire of Chicago, have now paid off every dollar of Return Premium due to those insured in said company at the time of their suspending business. Those persons, all of Centre Co., who received the amounts placed opposite their names from the company can testify to the above statement as correct, viz:

——The following item we find in an exchange, and ask persons who send communications to the REPUBLICAN, to study and observe it:

The kind of communications that are interesting to every reader of a county paper, and which the editor will always be pleased to publish, can be written by almost any intelligent person. Such communications should contain something relating to one or all the following subjects: Public or private improvements in the neighborhood in which the writer resides; the crops and their condition; schools and their prosperity; accidents or incidents that may occur and in which the public are interested; public meetings or elections; all marriages and deaths, together with everything connected with the general prosperity of the people of the locality. Avoid personalities, trifling neighborhood quarrels, and everything that does not interest the general public. Observe brevity, write plainly.

——Our readers will doubtless remember the great robbery that was committed at Petroleum Centre in this state in 1868, when the rich ollist Bennehoff was plundered of half a million dollars. Among those who committed the robbery was James Segar, who was a well-to-do merchant and was generally respected. A few days after the crime was committed, Segar left the place taking with him most of the plunder, thereby cheating his confederates. Two of the gang were arrested and convicted, and are now serving out their sentence in the penitentiary.

The recent arrest of Segar has brought to light his whereabouts during these six years. He went to New Orleans disguised as a Stevedore; from thence he visited alternately, Cuba, South America, Australia, Mexico, and from thence to Texas where he became one of the largest cattle owners in that State. His stock amounted to forty thousand head. Here he was known by the name of McGee. Recently he took a drove of cattle to Denver and while there the opped at a restaurant kept by one Potter who had recently moved from Pennsylvania, and who at once recognized McGee the long lost Segar. He left the place, but soon returned, thinking he could easily bribe Potter, but on entering the restaurant, he was at once arrested. Potter, it seems, is the nephew of one of Segar's confederates, who is now suffering imprisonment for the offense and Segar as carried off all the plunder, he was not disposed to shield him. This occurred the last of April and probably Segar ere this, is in a Pennsylvania prison. His wife still lives at Petroleum Centre and had supposed her husband dead.

——The Philipsburg Journal says that the physicians of that town would like the competition off some young doctor who would take off their hands the large practice of that class who never pay, and that any one who can stand the press financially and physically and would like the job should pack up his trunk and come along."

We hope that some young doctor will take up with this offer and journey to the town of Philipsburg, and that the people that are able to pay will patronize him liberally so that he can well afford to attend to the suffering poor. No physician with the soul and heart of a man within him will turn a deaf ear to the sad wail of the poor poverty stricken child asking with tears in its eyes and little hands uplifted that he will come and save its mamma, father, brother or sister, and no physician is worthy of the patronage of the rich and middle classes who will refuse to help one of God's stricken children because they are poor. As far as our observation has gone God has most abundantly blessed those men who without stopping to enquire in advance whether he was likely to receive his pay or not, has always attended every call of the sick from whatever quarter it might come. If therefore the physicians of Philipsburg, care nothing for their profession except to make money in it, we think it would be an excellent field for a young man who loves his profession for its own sake, and has a heart that can feel for a suffering mortal however poor he may be, and such a man will prosper; the good will of the poor will make a reputation for him and if he does it cheerfully, God will bless him for God loves a cheerful giver. And after all what does it cost, only a little time and the writing of a prescription, and it is nothing but laziness that will cause a man to grumble, for we do not believe there is a doctor in that town who would not be able to attend to all the calls he would receive from those able to pay. Will a man then indulge in idleness and leave the poor to suffer and die of neglect? Alas, "man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn.

—The Republican Committee of Forest county will meet at Tionesta on the 26th instant.

(Liberty Township Correspondence.)

LIBERTY TOWNSHIP, May 6th, 1874.

MR. EDWARD T. TUTEN—Dear Sir. I have taken upon myself this morning to inform you that we are alive and trying to be up to the times in Liberty, that there is enterprise and energy in our people. The Baptists are about to fence their beautiful little church building in the town of Eagleville, making ample preperations for the late called Bishop, the Rev. William Biggart of Elmesport, Lycoming County, Pa. He is a young man and an able brother in the faith and one that loves to present the truth in its ancient purity, knows no unessentials in the Commandments of Christ. May the good Lord spare his life long on the earth that he may pursuade many to obey the truth and seek the Lord before it is everlastingly too late. To the Lord be all the praise. We have four Sabbath Schools within one mile and an eighth, two in Eagleville; first the Baptist, as you come in to the beautiful little town on the west road. They have good schools on account of the good music for which much credit is do Miss Liza Bumgardner. She is a splendid organist, a lady in manners, a christain in behavior and beautiful in appearance; if we had a thousand such young ladies to head society and to sit at the head of church choirs in Centre County we would be second to none in the state. The next great curiousity that attracts the attention is the infant class of our well known friend W. F. Courter, which always ranges from ten to twenty five little boys, generally the 4th of the school. It would make any man's heart glad that is a lover of the truth, to hear those little bright eyed boys answering from one to two hundred scripture questions, commencing at the creation of the world down to the present time. Our second school is the disciples of Christ, not large in proportion to the large membership of the church. Poor order—if you are in the centre of the house it is hard for one to understand the opening prayer of the Superentendent, for the shuffling of feet and whispering. It is not the wish of the superentendent, Joseph Q. Williams, but the fault lies in the members of the church, as they do not take an active part in the school, as it appears that they can scarcely procure teachers to run the school. Our esteemed friend H. A. Forsman is teaching quite a fine school this summer—some forty-five or fifty scholars. Henry is a good teacher, may he live long and enjoy himself in the good work.

Liberty was cheered up yesterday by seeing Mr. Christian Beachdel driving and leading by the nose his splendid bullock to Taylor, Day and Moore's scales to have the famous creature weighed, that he purchased some time ago from the Messrs. Valentines, and what do you think this bull weighed? Sixteen hundred fifty-five pounds, fine fellow! Much credit is due Mr. Beachdel for introducing such fine stock into this county, which is in much need of the same. Mr. Beachdel is one of Centre County's best farmers, has the cleanest fence rows and the best cleared up farm in Bald Eagle Valley.

Mr. Benjamin Ligget is famous for large potato crops, one thousand bushels last fall and probably one hundred and twenty-five tons of hay. Ben's farm was much out of repair when he came in possession of it, but he has been limeing very heavy and it does beat all how his farm is coming on, the best clover that I ever saw I saw last year, that Ben had seeded after the corn was planted, clover as thick as it could well stand on the ground. Ben is giving considerable attention to his farm. The adjoining farm is a good farm, belonging to F. D. Ligget, it is for sale, good neighbors each side of this farm, he is going west for the present. I will close, I will endeavor to give the news from Liberty every week.

——We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Horace Waters & Son, headed, "WATERS CONCERTO PARLOR ORGANS," and for a description of them we can't do better than to copy the following:

A NEW FEATURE IN ORGANS—WATERS' CONCERTO PARLOR ORGAN.—The great merit of the concerto stop is, that it approximates nearer than any other to the human voice. If we avert the attention from the instrument while this delicate addition is being operated, the impression is instantaneous that it is to the human voice under exquisite culture that we listen. Of course the origin of this improvement, and the exact manner in which its advantages have been made so prominent in this organ, are known to the patentee alone; but we doubt if the inventor can make it plain why the direct result has occurred. The effect of the concerto attachment is simply softening and vocalizing. It seems to catch a note that might have been shrill or reedy, and at once soothe it into something as sweet and musical as a human whisper. The writer was informed by Mr. Waters that on account of the new stop, the instruments were bought up almost as rapidly as it was possible to manufacture them.—Brooklyn Union.

——The license bill now before the house is one of the very worst of its kind, it requires the taking out of a license, but fixes no penalty for a violation, as any one can see.

——Below we give by request a statement of the expenses and receipts of the Mountain City Band. We have noticed with a great deal of pleasure the rapid progress this band has made since its organization. We were honored with a serenade by the band last Friday evening and we have certainly not heard better music by any visiting band since we came to this place. There is one thing however that they yet need, and that is a uniform. Nothing adds so much attraction to a parade as a well uniformed band of good musicians. The Mountain City Band has given ample proof of the ability of its members as musicians and they deserve all they ask at the hands of our citizens. We were shown four subscriptions lists that are to be presented to our citizens and the amount to be raised is $300, and the members of the band are anxious to be supplied before decoration day as they are engaged for that occasion, as well as the 4th of June, when the Penna Reserves will be here. We hope and expect to hear, one week hence, that the full amount has been raised. It is due to the band for the patience and perseverance they have manifested, it is due to the credit of our borough and the pride and pleasure of the citizens. We have now the best band in the county. Let it be the best uniformed and equipped, so that when it appears upon our streets it will be looked upon with pride and satisfaction. We are authorized to state that the band will do escort duty for all Sunday School parades and picnics free of charge, which generous offer will certainly be appreciated.

REPORTERISMS.—A fellow by name of Meisner, living on a killdear farm back of Miller's Hotel, in Hartley township, Union county, started out on a foraging expedition, on Wednesday 22nd, with horse and wagon went for Brushvalley, and during the night helped himself to 18 bushels of seed oats, 2 bushels of cloverseed and some rye, out of the barn of Charles Brumgard, and filled up his load with corn out of the crib of George Brumgard, and went on his way home rejoicing. Mr. Charles Brumgard wanted to sow his oats next day, and not finding it 'there,' the strange wagon tracks were followed, until some teams were met coming in an opposite direction, who reported having seen a man with a wagon heavily laden. The pursuit was continued to Miller's tavern (Stitzer's) where the pursuers learned that he had been there and also his name and residence and that he alleged buying the grain from Newt Wolf. Of course the chap was soon treed, and arrested. He offered to make things square by paying $100. He was, however, taken off to jail at Lewisburg.

—The Journal of Education thinks that Americans have a peculiar habit of using large words, and especially notices the assumption of the title of professor by men who after a year's study in some normal school, or a four year's course in a school or college, have undertaken to govern schools of twenty pupils. This reminds us of a Clinton county Teacher's Institute, which met Logansville some 18 years ago, when a resolution was passed for themselves, declaring, 'that each teacher holding a professional certificate hereafter be titled professor.'

—The citizens of Manor School district met on last Sunday, April 26, at the above named School house, for the purpose of reorganizing a Union Sunday, School. There was a good attendance considering the unfavorable condition of the weather and roads. The following named officers were elected: Supt. Leonard Rhone; Sec'y, G. W. Boal; Librarian, Jacob Wagner; Assistant Librarian, Ephriam Keller; Treasurer, Michael Spicher, Jr. This School in connection with the Earleystown Sunday School, held several interesting and instructive S. S. Concerts during the past winter, condubted by Rev. Crittenden and Superintendents of the School.

—There is a pine tree down the valley which must be twisted more than any screw we ever saw, and as a friend relates us, must be a great ways down from top to ground, following the grain. This pine was struck by lightning, and the electricity followed the twist. There was a squirrel in the top when the tree was struck, and the little animal at once made a straight cut down the trunk, reaching the bottom before the lightning.

—This is the way it was done: A rat, which had done considerable mischief gnawing a silk-dress and some other articles, belonging to a colored lady in this town, was at last cornered by her, held down with a poker, and tenderly chastised with a little switch and then let run. Really doctor Bergh couldn't bring in complaint here. Did ever rat recieve kinder treatment for depredations?

——Go to Brachbill's on Spring street, for all kinds of furniture, wall paper. A large variety of styles constantly on hand.

——The meeting of the Knights Templar now in its full tide of power, is as grand an affair as its most enthusiastic supporters could have desired. The streets are all handsomly decorated, the hotels are crowded to overflowing, and there are fair women and brave men upon our streets.

But perhaps it would be impossible for such an affair to pass off without some little ripple to vex and annoy. We noticed last Saturday afternoon quite a party busily engaged in decorating a large arch which was to go up near the Depot. After working all the afternoon, and when some had congratulated themselves that the work was most completed, they adjourned to supper, after which they proposed to do the raising. After supper a force was gathered and the huge affair was raised. It was intended to fasten it in its place with wires, but the wire proved not to be strong enough, and one of them parted letting the huge structure upon which so much labor had been expended fall to the ground. It was broken in pieces and of course its further usefulness destroyed. The idea of raising an arch in this place was then abandoned, and Monday a new one was made and successfully raised opposite the Masonic Hall. The display of evergreen and flags throughout the town is quite elaborate, and no doubt would have been even more so had not the supply given out. Quite early Monday morning James Welch & Co. however, who determined that there should be flags enough if they could possibly accomplish it, telegraphed on Monday for a large supply which were ready by Tuesday noon. Bellefonte is one of the most beautiful towns in the state, and when she puts on her holliday dress she looks like a perfect paradise. At the time of going to press the entertainments have hardly commenced so we shall have to defer further comment until next week.

DIED

On the 7th inst., at Howard, Sarah, wife of Jacob Baker, aged 65 years, 10 months and 3 days.

On the morning of the 5th inst, at Howard, Frank Ellis, son of Henry C. and Mary E. Heiter, aged 2 years, 3 months and 24 days.

There in that land that knows no blight
His spirit speaks in heavenly light;
Though fondly loved and loving, too,
Yet Jesus loved him still more true.

He gave him first our hearts to enchain,
Then gently drew him back again;
And thus by golden links of love
And bids us to our home above.

Methinks his spirit hovering near
Our stricken hearts to soothe and cheer,
And woo us to those seats above,
Where all is joy and peace and love.

O angel babe, thy mission fill;
Thus ministering be with us still
Till freed from earth we soar away
To dwell with thee in endless day.

They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lockjaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no articles ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretends to do. CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

The Gem Microscope.

The Gem Microscope is truly an optical wonder. It reveals thousands of unseen wonders and curiosities of God's minute creation; the small worlds teeming with animal life, the little things of nature with which we are surrounded, but which are invisible to the naked eye, the thousand and one curiosities and minute objects with many of which we are familiar, because we have read or heard of them, but which to the unaided vision have remained a sealed book, are brought within the realizing reach of our sight and understanding by the use of the Gem and many wonders entirely new to us are also brought to sight by its use. No article for the same price has ever been offered to the public which combines the essential points of valuable instruction and entertaining refined amusement to so great an extent as this instrument; every family has only to appreciate its merits to become its possessor. It is so low-priced that everybody can have one, and so simple a child can use it. Parents should provide their children with this valuable instructor. This Microscope possesses the great advantage of being used by lamp-light as well as by daylight, and thus affords entertainment after the occupations of the day are laid aside. It is safely mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price ($1.50) to any address by THE BEVERLY COMPANY, 973 Wabash Ave., Chicago. See their advertisement elsewhere.
